

What is a CV?

In its full form, CV stands for curriculum vitae (latin for: course of life). In the US, Canada, and Australia, a CV is a document you use for academic purposes. The academic CV outlines every detail of your scholarly career. You use it when you apply for jobs. A Curriculum Vitae contains details about your education, professional career, publications, awards, honours, and other achievements. In some of the countries, CV is mostly only for academic applications: academic jobs, grants, research fellowships, etc.

What to include in a CV?

- 1 Contact Information
- 2 Research Objective, Professional Profile, or Personal Statement
- 3 Education
- 4 Professional Academic Appointments
- 5 Books
- 6 Book Chapters
- 7 Peer-Reviewed Publications
- 8 Other Publications
- 9 Awards and Honors
- 10 Grants and Fellowships
- 11 Conferences
- 12 Teaching Experience
- 13 Research Experience / Lab Experience / Graduate Fieldwork
- 14 Non-Academic Activities
- 15 Languages and Skills
- 16 Memberships
- 17 References

What is a Resume?

A resume (or résumé, from French “to sum up”) is a short, concise document used for job applications in the US and Canada. The purpose of a resume is to provide recruiters with a brief overview of the candidate’s work history. A good resume should be targeted at a specific job and one to two pages long.

- 1 Contact Information
- 2 Resume Summary or Resume Objective
- 3 Work Experience
- 4 Education
- 5 Skills
- 6 Additional Sections (Awards, Courses, Publications, Certificates, Conferences, etc.)

Difference between CV and resume lies in the length, layout, and purpose of these documents. CVs have no length limit; resumes are typically one to two pages long. A CV details the whole course of the candidate's academic career; a resume summarizes skills and work experience. CVs are used for academic purposes, resumes—to apply for jobs.

Cover letters should be different for every job seeker. They allow an opportunity for your personality to come through and elaborate on your unique qualifications related to the job description. Also note that the name “cover letter” is misleading. Rarely will a cover letter be read as an introduction to your resume. If your resume passes the test, only then will your cover letter be able to boost your candidacy. Your cover letter could push you over the top, but your resume will get you in the door. Make sure it hit addresses the top skills mentioned in the job description, contains the measurable results recruiters want to see, and is compliant with applicant tracking system algorithms.

COVER LETTER EXAMPLE FOR INTERNSHIP

Every cover letter should be approached the same way: based on the job you are applying for and your experience. However, writing a cover letter for an internship can be a little trickier, since you're likely applying for the internship with little to no previous experience.

One of your biggest tool when applying for jobs is previous relevant experience, but you don't have experience it is fine as everyone starts out with no experience. Volunteer work can be very valuable and should be mentioned in a cover letter if it is relevant. Please consider picking up some relevant unpaid work to help you in your search for an internship or job.

Think of your education as your work experience. In the first paragraph, introduce yourself to the hiring manager and tell them about what you are studying and why you are interested in the offered job.

In the next paragraph, explain your goals for the rest of your education and your future career (just the next few years). Make sure the goals you mention are relevant to the job for which you are applying.

In the final paragraph, thank the hiring manager for his or her time and leave your contact information as well as a mention of any attached files. This paragraph is the same as it would be for a paid job.

Dear Mr./Ms. _____,

I am writing to follow up on our discussion during the recent _____ Fair at _____ College. I enjoyed speaking with you about _____ (insert type(s) of positions or opportunities discussed) with _____ (name of organization). Thank you for sharing your insights about the recruiting process and the current needs of your organization.

As we discussed, I will be graduating in _____ (date of graduation) with a degree in _____ (major). In researching your organization, I am particularly interested in _____ (cite 1-2 facts). (Next, highlight one or two qualifications from your resume that you think would be of greatest interest to the employer based on your career fair discussion.) My background in _____ (related knowledge, skills, or experience) has helped prepare me for the challenges of the position.

I have attached another copy of my resume for your review. Please let me know if you require any additional information. Thank you again for your time and consideration. I look forward to speaking with you again soon.

Sincerely,
